Homeless services to shift in Sunnyslope

By Kathryn M. Miller

In mid-April, Sunnyslope's St. Vincent de Paul Dining Room board voted to transition towards closure as new shelters in the area near completion and the City of Phoenix brings a heat relief station to the adjacent Sunnyslope Family Services Center.

The dining room, which opened in 1996 on 10th Avenue south of Hatcher Road, has in recent years raised concerns among neighbors due to issues of litter and loitering created by its patrons.

News of the dining room closure, which will take place by the end of 2023 or early 2024 as area shelters serving those experiencing homelessness open, was enthusiastically welcomed by many neighbors and area business owners when it was shared at a May 11 meeting of The HUB (Hatcher Urban Businesses).

"I think people were appreciative of the fact that [St. Vincent de Paul] recognized the issues," said Caroline Lobo, co-chair of The HUB. "The way they phrased it, the reason they were closing is they felt like that place was not a place of dignity anymore for their clients."

"Essentially, our services in Sunnyslope are going to transition from our center on 10th to meal services provided at the CASS shelter, Project Haven, and the CBI Shelter, North Mountain Healing Center," explained Danielle McMahon, associate chief operations officer at St. Vincent de Paul. "That transition

Fifth-grader and Royal Palm neighborhood resident Paloma celebrated on May 15 after being named the Arizona state winner of the 2023 Google for Doodle contest (submitted photo).

Local fifth-grader named 'Doodle' state winner

By Kathryn M. Miller

Each year for the past 14 years, Google has invited students in grades kindergarten to 12 to create a "Doodle" that will grace the search engine's homepage. For its 15th year contest, the theme is "I am grateful for..."

Fifty-five state and territory winners were chosen, representing various ages groups: grades K-3, 4-5, 6-7, 8-9 and 10-12. The winning doodles were made public on May 18, and the Arizona state winner is Paloma, a fifth-grade student who lives in the Royal Palm neighborhood.

"I named my artwork 'World of Gratitude,' and it's supposed to represent that I'm grateful for reality and imagination," Paloma said of her colored pencil and Sharpie creation. "On the imagination side, it's supposed to represent my friends and family, my cat, Oreo and nature. And then on the imagination side, it's supposed to represent more color, my dreams and ideas in my head."

Doodles were judged using three parameters: artistic merit, based on artistic skill; creativity, representation of the contest theme, use of the letters in the Google logo, and the unique approach to the Doodle; and theme communication, how well the contest theme is expressed in both the artwork and the written statement.

The student's mom, Ily, is incredibly proud of her daughter's accomplishment.

"Paloma is very creative," Ily said. "Although in a competition there's the technicality...we had to work with her on the technicality of it. But she delivered beautifully."

Paloma says that she enjoys creating art, but it was reading that drew her to it.

"I got involved with art because of books, actual-

Happy Summer, North Central Neighbors!

I know, we hit our first 100 degree reading April 30...but this month makes it official. And with the heat, comes a friendly reminder to be safe out there: stay hydrated, be mindful of heat warnings and closures on Valley trails, never leave young children or pets in hot cars, and look out for your four-legged family member's sensitive paws on hot sidewalks.

For this month's cover stories, we followed up with our May 2023 cover story and highlighted some of the shifts in the ways that individuals experiencing homelessness in North Central will be served. We also caught up with a fifth-grader from the Royal Palm neighborhood who is the Arizona state winner of this year's Doodle for Google contest.

Our top story in Community focuses on a North Central teacher who is retiring after 30 years of teaching at St. Francis Xavier school. And in this month's Café Chat, Marjorie Rice went downtown to talk to the chef at Carcara about how she is integrating locally-sourced products in the restaurant's Arizona-centric menu.

As always, you can learn about the great things happening in our North Central schools, catch up on other community, business and dining news, and explore our round-up of things to do in the Valley.

We wish all the dads out there a very happy Father's Day, and hope that you enjoy our June issue!

"I decided to sell my home in North Central and buy another one also in North Central to be closer to my grandchildren. The home and area we wanted to live in was in terrific demand and our home of 40 plus years that we needed to sell was a challenge. After trying to make this transition for more than a year we started working with Andy Schreck of RETSY Schreck group right here in North Central.

Andy provided us with the plan that did not burden our purchasing position and we were able to secure the home we desired. His advice and preparation on the sale of our previous home was smooth and allowed us to move straight to the new home. Andy gave us great guidance and with creative options to make this deal happen. He spent a great deal of time with me explaining the process and the different options in each phase. I would recommend him without reservation!" - Diane S.

Teacher retires after three decades

By Kathryn M. Miller

At a May 15 event held in the gym at St. Francis Xavier school, North Central resident and fourth-grade teacher Nancy Grucky was joined by family, friends, colleagues and students as she prepared to say “farewell” to a school she began teaching in 1983.

A Phoenix native, Grucky began her own education at St. Gregory grade school, then attended Xavier College Preparatory. College took her out of state to Gonzaga University, where she took her first teaching job. But an untimely death in the family brought her back home to Phoenix, and eventually to St. Francis Xavier.

Grucky’s first teaching stint at the school began as a substitute in 1983. She taught there until 1987, when she and her husband, John, were expecting their second child. She made the decision to take a break from teaching to stay home and raise her family, but when her third child started grade school, she knew it was time to return to a job she loved. So, she returned to the school in 1996 and has been teaching there ever since.

The teaching profession is not always an easy one, Grucky said, but it does have its rewards.

“It is a very difficult job. It doesn’t pay well... it sounds cliché, but it is extraordinarily rewarding, when you see that ‘aha’ moment where they actually get something that was hard or they feel proud of themselves for their learning,” she said.

Another reward for staying at one school for decades, is that the teacher has seen her students return to the school as teachers, which is incredibly validating. One student, Sarah Behring, was a student and has returned as Grucky’s fourth-grade teaching partner.

In a recent school newsletter, Behring wrote, “Mrs. Grucky taught me to find joy in my life every day and her joy of teaching is what shines above all else.”

But challenges always arise. During the pandemic, Grucky said she came close to leaving, because the new demands of technology threw her a curve ball.

“When the pandemic hit, I was in big trouble, because I was not fluent at all with using the technology. My partner teacher at the time, Ashley Ezell, who was young enough to be one of my kids, I just looked at her and said, ‘I might have to quit because I really just can’t do this. It is just way too difficult for me.’ She was so amazing. She was the one that embraced me and just said, ‘We can do this. We will do this.’

It is that kind of camaraderie that kept her going.

“All of the women that I’ve worked with, they have made me a better teacher because they have imparted who they are on me. I’ve been lucky that I’ve taught with so many amazing teachers,” Grucky said.

And the feeling of admiration for Grucky is returned.

“Nancy is just an absolute gem,” said St. Francis Xavier principal Ryan Watson. “She is the epitome of professionalism, competence and care for our kids.”

Watson added, “She’s a great mentor to our newer staff. She’s a great role will happen once both locations have fully opened. We don't want to leave a gap in services for anyone that's in need in the community. So, our kitchen will provide three meals a day, seven days a week at each of those locations. It will be, in total, around 270 folks across the two sites."

She added, "Once those open, we'll be partnering with them to help our guests find a solution in their shelters and hopefully get off the streets. It is the first time ever in the area where there are beds available. We serve the community of Sunnyslope, our guests are part of the community of Sunnyslope, and this gives them an option that's close to home for them that hasn't been there before."

The Haven is a Central Arizona Shelter Services (CASS) facility that will provide 170 shelter units for older adults, age 55 and up, who are experiencing homelessness. The North Mountain Healing Center, a Community Bridges, Inc. (CBI) shelter, will provide 100 units. Both facilities were existing buildings that were acquired by the respective organizations to be rehabilitated into shelters.

"The property is currently undergoing renovations but our goal is to get our doors open as quickly as possible to help seniors in need," said Dayna Gabler, chief development officer for CASS said of The Haven, which is located at 8152 N. Black Canyon Hwy.

"Our plan is to open the first set of units in July 2023, which should be approximately 40 units, and be fully operational by November."

"The Haven will be a closed campus model, meaning services are only available to shelter guests," Gabler added. "The Haven model will have private rooms and shared living areas that are ideal for seniors because they are safer and less overwhelming than congregate shelter models. Our seniors will also be able to keep their pets, which can often be a deterrent to entering other shelters. All guests will be case managed and work directly with our housing team to help them find safe and stable permanent housing opportunities."

The projected opening date for the CBI facility, located just north of Dunlap Avenue on 25th Avenue in a former Ottawa University building, is between January to June 2024, according to the last information available to a City of Phoenix Office of Homeless Solutions (OHS) spokesperson.

The city of Phoenix made a $4 million CARES Act funding investment in each of the facilities, with the Arizona Department of Housing investing $7.5 million in the CASS location and Maricopa County investing $6 million in the CBI location.

Another area shelter on the horizon is a new U.S.VETS facility, located just southwest of the intersection I-17 and Cactus Road and dedicated to housing military veterans. Although this shelter is not partnering with St. Vincent de Paul for meals, it will serve the Sunnyslope and surrounding areas.

Formerly a motel, the remodeling on the facility began in 2021 and the organization hopes to open its transitional housing this summer, between June and July, says Jennifer Gewarges, executive director of U.S.VETS-Phoenix.

"The transitional housing is about 162 beds. Within different programs that we have grants for and right now we have about 20 to 25 permanent housing unit," Gewarges said. "For the residential side, we still have to wait for the second phase, which includes staff offices."

Despite all of this, it feels like one step forward, two steps back for residents and businesses along Hatcher Road. At the same May HUB meeting, the City of Phoenix announced that a new heat respite shelter will open across the street from the dining room.

"I think people are not exactly happy about it," Lobo said. "They're willing to give them an opportunity, but we're very concerned that we are going to be inundated with people."

She added, "We empathize with what the city is trying to do, trying to increase that touch point, so that we can get people to help that they need. So, we're going to work with them to see where this takes us."

Rachel Milne, director of the City of Phoenix Office of Homeless Solutions, broke down the details of the new shelter.

"We were lucky enough to receive a grant from Maricopa County for specifically for heat respite," Milne said. "We wrote a grant to fund the heat respite center at the Sunnyslope Family Services Center.

She added that the respite area

Welcome, June

Summer Solstice, Family Vacations, great rates at hotels and golf courses, add the very long and very hot days in June – this is the beginning of our Phoenix summers. Not for the weak, and always keeping your sunscreen close, Phoenix continues to be the greatest city to live and raise your family.

Every day, I realize how lucky I am that my dad, Herb Lieb, chose Central Phoenix when he relocated from North Carolina. He became partners with Geri Aron (Kagel), Kagel's, a fashionable ladies' apparel store located in Park Central Mall. Dad opened stores in the old Thomas Mall and Scottsdale Fashion Square but eventually closed those two stores. Having found success in the retail scene, he returned to France as a tourist. He had been there in World War II after joining the US Army, under very different circumstances. While revisiting France, he observed the popularity of the "discotheque" with a DJ instead of live music and wildly more liberated.

Herb was inspired by the astrological trend that was so popular. Lieb (an Aquarius) opened Herb's Underground Disco, a zodiac-themed nightclub located in the lower level of the Greyhound Tower, at Central Avenue and Clarendon with Bill Haywood as his Disc Jockey.

I was reminded of the many places my dad used to patronize when I listed and sold 322 W. Stella Lane. Back in the day, this address backed up to the Ambassador Hotel (4th Avenue and Maryland) where the famous local restaurant/pub called Rocky's Hideaway was located (homage to Rocky Costanzo.) Mary King, who recently moved to LAUNCH|COMPASS and is working to establish our Central Division with like-minded agents, brought the buyer on day 2 of the listing.

Because of the many friends and business associates with the retail stores and nightclubs, my father knew about half of the population in Central Phoenix, which eventually was a great boost for me when I decided to move out here after playing college baseball at Coastal Carolina in 1977-78.

Dad opened the Jockey Club Nightclub, 2210 E. Highland Ave., in 1976 and I started working there in 1978. We sold it in 1985. As many of you, know I met my wife MaryAnn there when she filled in as a DJ one night and I never let her leave! We then opened a subsequent Jockey Club at 52 E. Camelback in 1989 with dad's friends as investors, Marsha and Mal Straus, who had Leonard's Luggage in Park Central Mall; Burt Lewin; and Mike Hayes. As some of you remember, we leased the club in 1995 to the movie, "Waiting To Exhale," starring Whitney Houston and Angela Bassett. If you watch the dance club scenes, it was inside the Jockey Club, what is currently Chipotle Restaurant at the south end of Uptown Plaza.

The current Uptown Plaza, anchored by AJs Fine Foods, was preceded by Euro-Market where Guy Coscas, a specialty grocer, offered Chris Bianco the opportunity to make and sell pizzas in the corner of his store, becoming his original restaurant in 1987. We are all fortunate to call the New York Native and his family our own, as he has made a bit of a splash with (2) Pizzeria Bianco, Pane Bianco, and Tratto here in the Valley and now Pizzeria Bianco DTLA.

The community holds a wealth of these magical stories that become precious gems. Our Central Division of LAUNCH|COMPASS continues to expand and we look forward to working together to find and/or sell your home. We would love to invite you to our new office in the Central corridor, once open, and answer any of your questions. We hope to see you soon--visiting one of our 'cool' restaurants, this summer.

ly,” the student said. “I just love books. And then I love drawing, occasionally, what I read in books.”

Her love of reading is reflected in her doodle, which depicts the artist in the center surrounded by books. And her love of art was fostered through an online art class and her art teacher, Kristin Vizzini.

Paloma says that she enjoys art because of the unbound creativity involved, “I like how I don’t have to do a specific thing. There’s nothing really wrong about art, unless you’re aiming for a goal on it.”

She added her encouragement to other young people to give art a try for their own exploration and enjoyment, saying, “There are no rules to art.”

Online voting among the 55 state and territory Doodle for Google winners ran from May 18–25. From there, five national finalists will be chosen. Then, a national winner, which will be featured on Google.com will be named. The winning artist will receive a $30,000 college scholarship, and their school will receive a $50,000 tech package. opened in the lobby of the center, located at 914 W. Hatcher Rd., May 15 and will be open from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, through Sept. 30. The respite area, which will have a capacity for up to 40 people, is partitioned off from the rest of the center, which will still provide its regular daily services to area residents.

The OHS is also partnering with St. Vincent de Paul.

“St. Vincent de Paul has a staff person who’s there throughout those hours, and then I have a staff person from my team from the OHS, a case-worker that’s there every day as well. We’re providing not only heat respite — water, the ability to get out of the elements for a little while — but also case management services, connection to other services if needed.”

She added, “We’ve got security there to make sure things operate smoothly.”

Milne also noted the “very dramatic change in approach” that the city has taken towards homelessness.

“Whereas prior we used to really rely on partners and contracts for shelter and housing and outreach, now, we are really taking on a lot of that ourselves. We are a direct service provider. We have case workers and case managers and navigators.”

She added, “The city’s been very focused on opening additional shelter beds. We have a total of 800 beds in various stages of development across the city. We’re really focused on that crisis intervention right now and getting those indoor places where people can be not only during the day but overnight and then move on their path to end their homelessness.”

Milne said that her office will continue to utilize its PHX C.A.R.E.S. (Community Action Response Engagement Services) outreach team to address encampments in the area, and encourages residents to contact them if they see issues in their neighborhoods.

model for our students, and I just feel like her consistent approach in the classroom always really reflects love and respect, because it goes both ways between her and the kids and her as well.”

The school, which was founded in 1936 and currently has 656 students enrolled in preschool through eighth grade, has seen plenty of changes over the years. But as the principal noted, one of the five tenets of Jesuit education is to be open to growth. In meeting the challenges of changing education landscapes, that is something that Grucky echoes, and she adds that balance is also important.

The teacher says that young people who are entering the profession should be flexible and seek balance.

“Plan and prepare your lessons very well. Then be prepared to pivot at any given time.”

Grucky added, “Spend time really getting to know your students. When they trust you and feel safe around you, they are willing to fail. It is through failure and finding mistakes in a safe setting that true learning takes place.”

As far as what comes after retirement, she is still contemplating that. In the meantime, she encourages her students and fellow teachers to follow another tenet of Jesuit teaching, “Go out and set the world on fire.”

She added, “And I’m planning on doing the same in my chapter two.

MAY is Better Hearing & Speech Month

Why is Better Hearing, Better Healthcare?

Research indicates hearing loss is closely related to common medical conditions such as diabetes, tinnitus, heart disease, depression and risk of falls. Annual hearing exams and treating hearing loss may be a primary factor in delaying or reducing dementia's chronic impacts. Better hearing enhances communication in all aspects of your life.

What is meant by Ears Collect, Brains Connect?

Ears collect auditory stimulus, but your brain converts those electrical impulses into precious sounds. The brain's auditory cortex performs hearing functions and, like other muscles, exercising it makes it more effective and resilient. Atrophy of vital brain pathways can significantly reduce hearing ability and speech comprehension.

Expertise is at the heart of everything we do

From hearing restoration to vertigo and dizziness, we are passionate about getting it right. We're here to help you move ahead with Better Balance, Better Hearing and a Better Life!

Transit station named after council member

In May, it was announced that the new transit center currently being built at Metrocenter will be named for former Phoenix District 1 City Council member Thelda Williams. The transit center will be located under the elevated light rail station, currently under construction, as part of the Northwest Light Rail Extension Phase II project, which runs 1.6 miles, from the light rail station at Dunlap and 19th avenues to Metrocenter's elevated station. Light rail testing is anticipated to begin in early 2024 along this stretch of the light rail.

Williams served on the Phoenix City Council from 1989-96 and 2008-21 and is the only person to have been named interim mayor three different times (in 1994, 2012 and 2019). She also served as vice mayor, chair of the Transportation Infrastructure and Planning Subcommittee, and chair of the Valley Metro Rail board.

The city says that Williams has been a strong proponent of Phoenix's voter-approved (August 2015) transportation plan, Transportation 2050, which helps fund various key projects throughout the city through the year 2050. She played a key role in the city moving forward with the planning and construction of light rail, bus service expansion, Phoenix Sky Harbor International Airport's expansion and operations and in the preservation of water resources and many street and other infrastructure projects.

Funding for T2050 comes from a 7/10ths of a cent city sales tax that started Jan. 1, 2016. Over the life of the plan, the funds are estimated to generate about $16.7 billion, or more than half of the plan's overall cost. There will be an additional $14.8 billion in federal and county funds, passenger fares and other sources.

Discover 'Women of the West'

This month, in partnership with AZ Humanities, the Sunnyslope Historical Society will host "Women of the West: Untold Stories from American History."

Besides Calamity Jane and Annie Oakley, any Western women come to mind? Probably not, says the Historical Society. Not because they weren't just as important to settling the West, but because history was so focused on the "goons and gunfighters," it forgot the women. So, it's a surprise that a 16-year-old Shoshone girl from Dakota Territory named Sacagawea would become the most celebrated woman in American history. It's little known that Sharlot Hall isn't just a museum in Prescott but was a real woman who saved Arizona's statehood. It's a shock to learn Colorado's first female journalist got a notorious cannibal out of prison.

Western women finally get their due in this presentation that tells what history forgot to mention. The free event will be held Saturday, June 10, 10-11:30 a.m., at the Historical Society Museum, 737 E. Hatcher Rd. Refreshments will be served; seating is limited.

For additional information, visit www.sunnyslopehistoricalsociety.org or call 602-684-1607.

The months of supply reading for all areas and types is currently 1.6. There have been only 3 years since 2005 where months supply in mid-May was lower than this. With only 1.6 months of supply, many buyers are having to compete with each other despite the weak demand. This is especially true of those trying to buy in the well-established and more central areas. In a balanced market, we expect to see 3 to 4 months of supply, while 6 months or more is seen in a market heading for decline.

HAPPY HOUR WITH HERSCH

The lights go down and the room grows dim,
As the night begins to settle in,
I'm lost in thoughts, I can't escape,
My minds a maze, a twisted shape.

I'm reaching out, but there's no one there,
I'm screaming out, but no one can hear,
I'm lost in this darkness, it's all I know,
But I need to find my way back home.

And I'm drowning in the weight of it all,
The darkness inside, it's taking its toll,
I'm searching for a way out of this hole,
But I'm trapped in my own mind, can't let go.

And I'm drowning in the weight of it all,
The darkness inside, it's taking its toll,
I'm searching for a way out of this hole,
But I'm trapped in my own mind, can't let go.

The hour's pass, but time stands still,
My heart's aching, my soul is ill,
The memories come, they flood my mind,
A never-ending cycle of rewind.

The night fades, the sun rises anew,
And with it, a chance to start anew,
I'll take a breath, and find my way,
Out of the darkness, to a brighter day.

City to hold water rate meeting

The Phoenix Water Services Department is continuing its public meetings this month to address the proposed rate increase for water and wastewater services and a proposed increase to the Stormwater Excise Tax. Preliminary estimates show the average residential customer will see an increase for water service (Water Usage Fee) of approximately 6.5 percent, or $2 in October 2023, with additional increases in March 2024 (6.5 percent) and March 2025 (13 percent).

The city says that the additional revenue is necessary to keep up with rising water and wastewater services costs, maintain its water infrastructure, and meet new regulatory mandates.

In a released statement, the Water Services Department said, “Despite the increase, Phoenix will still have some of the most affordable water services compared to similar cities, and customers who conserve water will be able to lessen the impact of the higher rates. In addition, the proposal includes a change to the water allowance structure to encourage water conservation. Changes to the water and wastewater rates impact everyone differently, and many factors determine how much each customer pays.”

The community is invited to attend an in-person meeting presented by city staff Saturday, June 10, 11 a.m. at Burton Barr Central Library, 1221 N. Central Ave. Spanish interpretation will be available at all in-person meetings. Community members can provide comments at the meeting or online through a comment form.

To learn more, watch a recorded presentation, or access the online rate estimator, visit www.phoenix.gov/proposedrates.

Teacher appreciation program continues

During National Teacher Appreciation Week in May, Four Peaks for Teachers launched its annual program, which runs through the summer.

Now in its 13th year, Four Peaks will support thousands of teachers across the Southwest, including distributing more than 7,000 school supply kits to teachers in Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico and Utah. The program will also provide 10 nominated teachers with $1,000 cash grants and one grand prize “Teacher of the Year” award winner with a $3,000 cash grant and custom teachers’ lounge makeover at their school.

Community members can nominate outstanding teachers through the “Thank A Teacher” program for the chance to win them a cash grant and a custom Teachers’ Lounge Makeover, through June 30 at www.fourpeaksforteachers.org. Nominated teachers must be 21 years of age and a resident of Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, or Nevada to be eligible to win.

Wedding expo returns for 28th year

Arizona’s largest wedding show is coming back to the Phoenix Convention Center in June for the 28th year. The Arizona Wedding Show returns on Sunday, June 11, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The expo will feature more than 200 of Arizona’s top event experts — from gowns and suits to bakeries and caterers, and even unique vendors like luxury portable bathrooms and bounce castles.

“The Arizona Wedding Show is the best resource not only for brides and grooms, but for anyone planning a party or event, whether it is a wedding, baby shower or graduation party,” said Arizona Wedding Show manager Stephanie Gatzionis. “What makes our show so unique is that the connections attendees make with our vendors can be relied upon for all wedding events like the bachelorette party, the wedding day and the honeymoon, but also for all the major milestones they would want to celebrate throughout their lives.”

The expo has many unique features, including live music, fashion shows, luxury lounges and the Ultimate Wedding Package, a raffle prize valued around $10,000. Many vendors are also offering special discounts for wedding show attendees. The event also offers a supportive, inclusive and welcoming environment for all attendees. With the help of LGBT Weddings’ stamp-of-approval vendor badges, members of the LGBTQ+ community can expect open and comfortable conversations with vendors and even find vendors that specialize in LGBTQ weddings.

Admission is $13. For more information, visit www.arizonawedding-showjune.com.

Renters: know your rights this summer

As the temperatures rise, Phoenix renters who find their cooling units are not keeping up with the heat can turn to the City of Phoenix for help.

Pet of the Month

Playful pup is a shelter long timer

With a smile like this, it is impossible to not instantly be in a better mood thanks to the adorable pup that is known as Austin. As the Arizona Humane Society's (AHS) most long timer resident, everyone is pulling for the lovable four-year-old pup to finally find his forever home after almost 10 months in the shelter.

Austin found his way to AHS all the way back in August of last year after he was originally rescued as an injured stray and treated in the shelter's trauma hospital for wounds, a puppy cold and allergies. This absolutely adorable boy has been a staff favorite since he has been with AHS due to his energetic and playful personality.

Sweet and friendly with all of his people friends, Austin loves playing, getting treats and showing off his tricks. Austin would also benefit from a house that has a yard for him to play in with lots of mental and physical stimulation. When weather is cooler, this active boy is the perfect running or hiking partner with the perfect mix of goofy to provide entertainment around the house.

To help him find his perfect forever home, Austin's adoption fee is free. Those interested in meeting Austin are encouraged to visit www.azhumane.org/adopt to learn more.

While Austin (pet number 709402) might have been adopted by the time of your Virtual Matchmaking Adoption by Appointment, AHS has dozens more wonderful pets who also need loving homes. Residents are encouraged to take a moment to meet some of the other dogs, cats and other companion animals at the shelter. Interested adopters can view available pets on the Adopt pages on the website, and schedule an appointment online to meet their next furry friend.

Desert tortoises still need homes

The Arizona Game and Fish Department (AZGFD) still has more than 100 young Sonoran Desert Tortoises looking for Arizona families to adopt them and provide forever homes.

In February, AZGFD kicked off its Tortoise Adoption campaign to find homes for nearly 300 desert tortoises, a record number of orphaned tortoises this year. While 130 have been adopted since awakening from brumation (sleeping period) in March, Arizona Game and Fish is asking for the public's help to find Arizona homes for 140 remaining tortoises, most of which are youngsters.

AZGFD says that desert tortoises make a great addition to a family home with the right preparation. The team of wildlife biologists will help each family find the perfect tort match based on their personality and prepare for their arrival.

Adoption is free, and to help make adoption even easier, detailed information about tortoise adoption, care, and habitat maintenance is available on the AZGFD website, www.azgfd.com.

Keep pets safe on the Fourth

With Independence Day just around the corner, it is a good time to remember that while fireworks may be a fun celebration for humans, they can cause severe anxiety for pets and can cause them to flee in terror from their homes.

According to the Arizona Animal Welfare League (AAWL), between July 4 and July 6, more pets are lost than any other time of year and local shelters are overwhelmed with the strays entering their doors. However, there are some precautions that residents can take to keep pets safe during the holiday.

First, plan ahead by exercising your pet to reduce their anxiety by the time fireworks start. Research when your neighborhood will have fireworks events and exercise your pet hours before. Walks or a game of fetch isn't the only way to exercise your pup. You also can plan some brain puzzles for them to help tire them out before night fall.

Second, make sure that pet ID tags and microchips are up to date in case they get separated from you.

Next, create a dark and quiet space for pets to get away from the noise. You can also try to minimize the noise by running a fan, a white noise machine, a TV or radio. Also, talk to your vet about other options or possible medications to help ease pet anxiety.

Finally, keep the pet secure. Pets become lost when they try to escape the loud noise of the fireworks, so it's important to keep pets inside as much as possible during the Fourth of July. Make sure that gates are secured and there are no holes that pets can get through in the backyard.

It's also best to keep dogs on a leash when they need to go outside, even in a fenced yard, so they don't run and hide because of the loud noise. Cats who are allowed to wander outside should be kept inside to keep them safe and secure during the holiday weekend.

Find more tips to keep pets safe and healthy online at www.aawl.org.

Businesses along the Northwest Extension Phase II that have been impacted by light rail construction can apply for up to $9,000 in financial assistance (a section of Phase I is pictured; photo courtesy of Valley Metro).

Business Briefs
Support for businesses along light rail offered

The Small Business Financial Assistance Program (SBFAP) will continue supporting businesses impacted by light rail construction in Phoenix.

Businesses located along the Northwest Extension Phase II and South Central Extension/Downtown Hub light rail projects can apply for this grant funding. Last year, the SBFAP granted $390,000 to nearly 70 businesses adjacent to light rail construction. In total, more than $765,000 has been disbursed to 131 businesses since program inception in 2021.

The program is funded through Phoenix Transportation 2050 and the Phoenix Community Development and Investment Corporation. Prestamos CDFI is the program administrator.

As the program enters its third funding year, new applicants and those who received funding previously are encouraged to apply for up to $9,000 in direct financial assistance, depending on their eligibility. The program is targeted to neighboring small businesses with 15 or fewer employees and not more than $750,000 in annual revenue.

Business owners can review the eligibility requirements and apply online at www.prestamosloans.org/valleymetro.

Celebrate annual Independents Week

Local First Arizona, which is celebrating 20 years of championing local small businesses in the state this year, is getting ready for its annual Independents Week celebration.

Held from June 24 to July 4, Independents Week invites residents to celebrate their local “independents” by patronizing the organization’s member businesses. Featuring its distinct Local Business Bingo Card, Independents Week encourages Arizonans to “go local” by supporting as many locally-owned businesses as possible. Each year, traditionally over the first week of July, first-timers and returning customers across the state discover new and fun ways to support Arizona’s small, independent businesses.

For more information, visit www.localfirstaz.com/indie-week-business.

JFCS receives
accreditation

Jewish Family & Children’s Service (JFCS) has received a national accreditation from the Council on Accreditation (COA), an international nonprofit organization that accredits human and social service providers in best practices for child welfare, behavioral health and community-based human and social service providers.

The COA accreditation indicates the programs at JFCS are designed and delivered in a way that provides the highest level of quality care and excellence.

The process for accreditation includes an in-depth review of the organization, comparing the organization and its programs against industry-wide standards of best practice, as well as an on-site visit to verify proper implementation of said standards.

Gift and home emporium opens on Central Avenue

Local artist and designer John Conrad Johnstonbaugh lends his craft to another creative concept this time in Uptown Phoenix on the northwest corner of Central and Camelback.

Conrad a native of Phoenix, and Lynn Kay Mary of Pomona, CA, have partnered up to create Monkey Business Botanicals & Trinkets, a botanical centric gift and home accents emporium that opened early 2023. An emporium of tableware, home accents, botanical art, tropical plants and flowers, gifts and the all-beloved trinket. SCHOOL DAYS

Brophy student earns statewide honor

Junior Achievement of Arizona has announced its 2023 18 under 18 winners — students who have started businesses and nonprofits, broken glass ceilings, volunteered or advocated for a cause. The organization says that they all have something in common: “They are not waiting until they are adults to make a difference in the world. These Arizonan students distinguish themselves with their creativity, passion, and drive.”

“Each year, we’re amazed by the next class of students,” said Katherine Cecala, CEO of Junior Achievement of Arizona. “They advocate for causes, start nonprofits to help others in our community, work with their schools to bring new ideas and programs to their schools, care about the environment or advocate for causes. They all have bright futures and we’re honored to know them.”

One of this year’s winners is Nathaniel George, a 16-year-old junior at Brophy College Preparatory.

“I am incredibly grateful and humbled for the opportunity to be recognized by Junior Achievement of Arizona and School Connect Arizona, and this experience has definitely empowered me to continue my work as a young leader,” George said.

He founded The Cactus Flower Initiative for Youth Entrepreneurship in 2022 to create more resources for students interested in business and entrepreneurship. The organization hopes to one day create legislation focused on youth entrepreneurship in Arizona and is currently working with Arizona State Treasurer Kimberly Yee to create a “Youth Entrepreneur Day.”

“I remember feeling a little disheartened that everything at the library was for adults,” said George. “There were not any resources for young entrepreneurs. That’s when I realized I could create something to help other teens.”

To create the Initiative, the student approached the ASU J. Orin Edson Entrepreneurship + Innovation Institute, Junior Achievement of Arizona and the City of Phoenix about creating more resources for students interested in business and entrepreneurship. He pitched his idea to the library and now partners with StartUpPhx to offer additional resources and perspectives to many of their programs such as their Small Business Expo, their summer Business Roadmap Series for youth and their Pitch-a-Palooza event.

George’s other accomplishments include serving on the Burton Barr Library Teen Advisory Council, founding the Young Entrepreneurs Club at Brophy, and helping plan for the first-ever school-wide Bronco Tank (Brophy’s version of Shark Tank), among many others.

“Entrepreneurship has been reserved for adults for a long time,” said George. “Entering this field as a young person was challenging. But I have realized the power of my voice as a young person in motivating and empowering others to create change. My determination and drive to succeed has allowed me to learn new skills and gain more confidence.”

Sunnyslope High School senior Abby Wolf received the prestigious National Merit Scholar title. The 2,500 Merit Scholar designees were chosen from a talent pool of more than 15,000 finalists. National Merit $2,500 Scholarship winners are the finalist in each state and are judged to have the strongest combination of accomplishments, skills, and potential for success in rigorous college studies.

'Topping out' ceremony held

Thanks to the passage of the 2020 bond initiative, Sunnyslope High School is nearing completion of the phase II classroom plan. With the help of Orcutt Winslow and McCarthy, phase II will bring over 75,000 square feet of classroom space to the campus. SHS and those who have been involved in the project celebrated a milestone May 15, where they placed the final steel beam on the structure.

The "topping out" ceremony is a tradition in which the last beam is signed and placed on a project signifying the completion of the building structure.

SHS quarterback commits to Oregon

Heavily recruited Sunnyslope football quarterback Luke Moga committed to the University of Oregon to play football. Moga has received more than 20 offers to play football at the Division 1 level, including the University of Miami, Texas Christian University, and both UArizona and Arizona State University. Central High names new principal

The Phoenix Union High School District (PXU) has announced Jacob Lambert as the next Central High School principal, beginning with the 2023–24 school year. He replaces Leticia Avalos, who served as the school's leader since 2018 and will transition to principal coach for the district next school year.

Lambert earned a degree in special education at Eastern Illinois University to become a third-generation teacher. He taught for two years in Illinois before moving to Arizona. Lambert taught in the Tolleson Union High School District for two years before joining PXU as an Exceptional Student Services teacher and coached cross country and track and field at Cesar Chavez High School.

Teacher wins 'Disney100' contest

Mountain View School kindergarten teacher Michelle Watzig was selected as a winner of the Disney100 Teachers contest, which was part of the Walt Disney Company's 100th anniversary celebration. The Disney Imagination Campus recognized 100 exceptional teachers who reflect creativity and imagination to attend a one-of-a-kind teacher event.

Michelle Watzig

Watzig was chosen for her essay out of thousands of submissions, and was one of two winners from Arizona — the contest honors two teachers from each state. She and the other 99 winners were treated to a four-day, three-night stay at the Disneyland Resort during Teacher Appreciation Week.

Students enjoy virtual author visit

First-graders at SS. Simon & Jude Cathedral School enjoyed a virtual visit April 21 with award-winning children's author Jennifer Ward.

Ward explained how she began writing stories in first grade. She shared her writing and illustrations throughout grade school and high school. The children were amazed when she showed pictures of the animals of the desert near her Tucson home that inspired her first published book. She explained her writing process and then read her newest book, "How to Find a Bird," and did a draw-along of a bird with the students.

Opening delayed to fall 2024

Phoenix Friends School (PFS), a new independent school in midtown Phoenix, has rescheduled its grand opening to fall 2024 due to delays in its renovation schedule. The new schedule enables PFS to expand the middle school to include seventh and eighth grades in its first year. The new opening date also allows for the Arizona Department of Education to iron out its issues with the new school voucher program for eligible families.

The school's learning model combines classical education and hands-on experience.

Classes promote healthy minds, bodies

As we age, it becomes increasingly important to focus on our overall well-being, both mentally and physically, says Jewish Family and Children’s Service (JFCS). According to experts, a healthy mind and body leads to a better outlook on life, prevents depression, and loss of motivation.

“When we don’t take the time for self-care, we risk losing our drive and motivation to be around others and stay active,” said Jennifer Brauner, director of the Center for Senior Enrichment at JFCS. “Not being physically active can also lead to difficulty moving our bodies and performing everyday activities.”

To prevent falls and foster independence, experts advise seniors to maintain habits that promote balance and core strength. This includes participating in exercise and movement classes, such as light weight-bearing exercises, chair yoga, and Tai Chi. To assist seniors with ways to exercise both body and mind, JFCS offers a series of classes both online and in-person across the Phoenix area. The majority of the classes are free to Maricopa County seniors.

June classes include Sit or Stand Ballet Series with Jennifer Cafarella Betts and Friends from Ballet Theatre of Phoenix; Frank Lloyd Wright: The Chicago Years with Professor Stephen Siek, director of the Emeritus College Academy at Arizona State University; Monumental Places: Arizona’s National Parks and Monuments with Gregory McNamee, an author, journalist, and

seniors – “neighbors” – needing rides to the grocery store, doctor’s appointments or friendly visits.

“Duet volunteers provide a lifeline for the isolated and homebound adults we serve to vitally needed services such as medical appointments, grocery shopping, and human connection,” said Ann Wheat, executive director of Duet. “We are so grateful for their generosity and dedication to our mission. We could not do what we do without our volunteers.”

In addition to making life sustainably better for a homebound senior, volunteering one’s time and talent has benefits the volunteer as well. Library launches summer reading program

Summertime means many students will have extra time on their hands, and to help fill the gap and stop “summer slide,” the Phoenix Public Library will join the annual Maricopa County Reads summer reading program. Summer slide is a regression in academic proficiency due to summer break.

From June 1 to Aug. 1, residents of all ages are invited to sign up and check out their local library for summer reading fun. The theme of this year’s program is All Together Now, encouraging readers to explore themes of unity, kindness, and community. The program is for all ages, and points are earned by reading, completing challenges, attending events and participating in community experiences.

To earn points, participants must read physical and electronic books (one point per minute of reading), or listen to audiobooks (one point per minute). In addition, participants can access online events, explore challenges and learn about community experiences from the Summer Reading website. These activities typically earn participants between 20-25 points.

Sign up now at www.maricopa-countyreads.org and get ready to start earning points. To find your local library, visit www.phoenixpubliclibrary.org.

Teens invited to work out for free

Planet Fitness announced the return of its High School Summer Pass program, inviting high schoolers ages 14–19 to work out for free at any of its locations through Aug. 31.

In its third year, High School Summer Pass offers high schoolers a way to stay active during the summer months. According to the World Health Organization (WHO), youth up to 17 years of age should get a recommended average of at least 60 minutes per day of moderate to vigorous intensity physical activity to boost their physical and mental health. In addition, in 2021, The Youth Risk Behavior Survey commissioned by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) found that 29 percent of high school students experienced poor mental health, a steady biannual increase since the survey was first fielded in 2011, demonstrating that youth today consistently — and increasingly — face mental health struggles.

To further motivate high schoolers who sign up are encouraged to enter the Planet Fitness High School Summer Pass Contest. Planet Fitness will award five teens in the U.S. with $10,000 individual academic scholarships via a TikTok video submission contest. To enter, teens are asked to post a TikTok video tagging @planetfitness using the hashtags #contest and #HSSP23US that describes their High School Summer Pass experience. The contest submission period runs through Aug. 31. The top five schools on the U.S. Leaderboard in each tier (as described in the rules) will each receive $10,000. These scholarships can be used to fund athletic equipment, field renovations, physical fitness classes and health and wellness initiatives.

High schoolers can register for the program at www.planetfitness.com/summerpass/registration to gain club access. Teens under 18 must register with a parent or guardian online or in-club.

Friendship Garden introduces Tea Tours

Japanese tea is seen as an inseparable part of Japanese culture, with production and practices that started centuries ago. Over time, changes in tea traditions and practices have led to the creation of various schools of tea, cafes and casual enjoyment. Having tea allows guests to take a break from the outside world and focus on the simple, transitory moment of serving and drinking tea, which is why the Japanese Friendship Garden launched its newest offering: Tea Tours.

Guests can enjoy an exclusive docent-led tea tour where they can learn the basics of Chanoyu and Japanese casual tea. The program begins with a tour of the Tea House, “Musuan,” where guests can admire Japanese seasonal art displays, learn about the history of the Tea House, and gain an introduction to modern Japanese tea culture.

Afterwards, indulge in a Japanese casual tea tasting service in the Tea House, and enjoy Sen-cha, Genmai-Cha, Hoji-Cha, and a Japanese sweet on authentic Japanese dishware. The entire tour will last for 60 minutes, giving participants ample time to soak in the experience and ask questions. The final 15 minutes will allow guests to explore the Roji on a docent led tour, where they will get to learn about the design of the garden and its purpose in Japanese Tea culture and history.

The tours will be held every Tuesday this month from 11 a.m. to noon (check-in is 10:45 a.m.). The cost is $40 for members; $45 for general admission, and garden admission is included. The tours will not be held July through September.

For additional information, visit www.japanesefriendshipgarden.org/tea-tours.

THE STATE OF FITNESS

By Bill Ross

I've been in the fitness industry since the mid-'80s and have seen a lot of diets and exercise fads come and go. Each one promises to be better than the previous one. If this were true, there wouldn't be an obesity epidemic. Has anyone else noticed that things are not getting better?

Even with all the improvements in technology . . . still not getting better. In my opinion, technology has only made things easier. And we all have a desire to make our lives easier. But, let me tell you, easier isn't always better. The less we move and the less we stimulate our bodies for growth, the worse we get.

However, there's a flip side. Doing too much also can be harmful. The problem is that most people don't know what is too little and what is too much. There is definitely a sweet spot for each person. So how do you find what is right for you? There are so many choices and options.

Classes, videos, gym memberships, group training, and personal training, to name a few. So, what is right for you? I think the answer depends on many variables. If you're young and have a decent disposable income, then you have many options. As you get older your options may change because of health conditions, injuries, fears and other factors.

Here are some thoughts about the different types of fitness programs.

Gym memberships – doing it on your own. The plus is generally low cost and lots of options. This can be great if you know what you are doing. However, most people don't. They generally hurt themselves or end up just using the cardio equipment, which gives them a false sense of accomplishment with minimal results. Low cost. No Accountability.

Classes can vary in style and degree of intensity. The plus is they're usually less expensive and can be very energetic and motivating. The drawback is that they're not specific to the individual's needs or abilities. Prices vary. Minimal Accountability.

Exercise videos. Least favorite and definitely most dangerous. No Accountability.

One-on-one personal training. Best possible outcome. The results will vary depending on the quality of the trainer, the system and the philosophy. Most Expensive. Most Accountability.

At Bill Ross Fitness Solutions, I've chosen to specialize in one-on-one training. This helps me focus on each individual regardless of age or circumstances, from a high school student trying to make a team sport to a retiree wanting to regain their strength and balance. My one-on-one training helps my clients work out properly and, when they do it right, they don't just get stronger physically, they get stronger mentally and emotionally.

I love it when my clients come back and tell me they just did something they've never been able to do, whether it's physical or stand up to something or face a fear. Because that's what it's all about. Not just what you do in the gym, it's how you take it with you and use it in your life

Our 30-minute workout concept creates maximum results in just a few days a week, fits into most busy schedules and can be geared to any fitness level. If you'd like to learn more about how you can achieve your best fitness outcome in just three 30-minute one-on-one sessions per week, please give me a call at 602-230-8581.

technique date from the 8th century and were among goods donated by the Emperor Shōmu to the Tōdai-ji in Nara.

"Learning the technique of shibori has been a fascinating journey," Wing said. "How to fold and stitch the fabric, what each technique means and learning about Indigo dye. Seeing the results after dyeing are always rewarding and surprising. The dyed fabric with its many different patterns is exciting and challenging to piece together to create overall movement and expression."

Residents can view Wing's work in person Sunday mornings between 10 a.m. and noon or by appointment. The work will be shown in the Narthex at Church of Beatitudes, located at 555 W. Glendale Ave. For additional information, call 602-264-1221 or visit www.beatitudeschurch.org.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Café Chat
Carcara offers an 'Arizona' experience

By Marjorie Rice

Angy Dykstra's roots in local foods go deep — first in a small town in Missouri's lush countryside at the Lake of the Ozarks, then as a transplant to Arizona, where she began her culinary career 26 years ago.

Today she's senior sous chef at Carcara, the 7,000-square-foot signature restaurant in the Sheraton Phoenix Downtown.

Living off the land, literally, was an integral part of Dykstra's family culture.

"We grew everything," she said. "My twin and I gathered our own crawdads (crayfish) and blackberries, for my aunt and uncle to make blackberry cobbler. They had their own pigs. We'd forage for mushrooms. My grandparents lived across the street and had a giant garden. I'd come home from school and go over and pick green beans.

"That's why with this restaurant, we try to do as much local as we can. We use goat cheese from Crow's Dairy, Ramona Farms, Yuma greens, olives and oil from Queen Creek."

Sausage from Schreiner's, the North Central butcher shop, appears in several iterations, including a smoked Southwest turkey sausage benedict with mole-spiced hollandaise on the brunch menu.

"We've always used Schreiner's stuff, we love it."

Arizona's 5 C's figure into the restaurant's design and menu. Climate is highlighted in the spacious patio, with ample table seating and comfy lounge areas that wrap the exterior.

Hotel restaurants are duty-bound to offer variations on surf and turf on their menus, and Dykstra takes it up an Arizona notch with prime ribeye steak (cattle) served with mashed sweet potatoes, roasted asparagus and blood orange demi-glace (citrus); and pan-seared trout Veracruz, with cilantro citrus rice, wilted greens and olive relish.

Citrus makes more appearances, including Baja shrimp ceviche with oranges, and an appetizer standout: hummus with orange, aromatics, cilantro, sriracha, heirloom carrots, watermelon radish and tortilla chips fried daily in-house.

"We change our menus twice a year, spring and fall, to be seasonal," she said. The spring menu rolled out in mid-May. "It's a lot of Sonoran and Native American-inspired dishes."

Look for examples in the guajillo-glazed heirloom carrots supporting a prime beef filet, habanero fig jam with the duck confit and goat cheese empanadas.

"We have a Sonoran Caesar, with croutons with mole spice and green chiles and roasted tomatoes," she said. "For our spring menu we're using barramundi, a white fish."

The barramundi are hatched in Australia and the fingerlings are transported to Desert Springs Barramundi, a fish farm in the southwest part of the state.

"It's kind of bizarre," Dykstra said. "It starts in Melbourne, Australia. They raise them in Colorado filtered water and fed a vegetarian diet without antibiotics and hormones."

The result is a firm-fleshed white fish perfect for searing. "We pan sear it, skin-on, and it's served with black bean chipotle, spinach, green and red peppers, on Spanish chorizo hash and topped with lime-butter cream sauce. "It's a lot of flavors, but they're all mild and muted, kind of like the décor."

Copper and cotton, the final two C's, are featured in the understated décor, in tones of terra cotta and exposed naturally finished beams, with muted earth-toned wall coverings and a spectacular hanging at the entrance, evoking a desert at dusk.

During COVID, when the restaurant was closed, a complete revamp included opening up the ceilings, adding new seating, a 14-foot-tall centerpiece tree and an updated bar area. The result is a spacious, open space with a sophisticated yet welcoming atmosphere.

Dykstra has relished her chance to put a personal stamp on food service in the hotel.

It's been a long road for the chef, who began her culinary career at Black Angus as server, trainer and other roles.

"In my 30s I decided, 'I think I'm going to be a chef,'" she said. That led to the Art Institute's culinary school in Metrocenter, attending classes during the day and waiting tables at night.

"After school, I went to the Sheraton as an entry level pantry cook, making salads," she said.

Over the next 13 years, she worked her way up to her current role, as senior sous chef for the hotel. Today, Dykstra runs the food program that goes to the pool, in-room dining for the 1,000-plus rooms, food in the lobby bar and Carcara.

As in many area eateries, cocktails are playing an ever-growing role.

"We do an amazing happy hour," Dykstra said. "We do a loaded guacamole with toasted pumpkin seeds, radish sprouts, jicama, pickled red onions and cotija on top."

Pair that with one of the signature cocktails — the Ajo passion margarita, for instance, with Casamigos Blanco tequila, harlequin orange liqueur, lime, passion fruit puree, jalapeno and Tajin (a spice blend with chile and citrus), and you pretty much have all the food groups.

Once a month on a Saturday, the hotel hosts The Merchantile, a pop-up marketplace with boutique items from local businesses, food producers, artists and designers. Guests can pair brunch with a visit to the market, and book a new Shop & More package that combines an overnight hotel stay with special amenities and discounts. For more about The Merchantile, contact www.sheratonphoenixdowntown.com or call 602-262-2500. The next Merchantile is scheduled from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., June 24.

Carcara, at 320 N. 3rd St., is open daily, with breakfast from 6:30 to 10 a.m., lunch 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., Monday through Friday and dinner daily from 5 to 10 p.m. Brunch is served weekends from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. For more information, contact www.carcararestaurant.com or call 602-262-2500.

Farmers markets offer summer shopping

Residents looking to shop local-ish for summer entertaining need look no further than these three farmers markets, in the heart of North Central and beyond.

Uptown Farmers Market is a dedicated gathering space for nearly 200 local Arizona producers. While its Wednesday and online marketplaces are closed for the summer, the Saturday market is still open every Saturday from 7 to 11 a.m. This Saturday farmers market is run year-round, by a very small crew, in the heart of Phoenix, which allows the organizers to have frequent face-to-face connection with its Arizona producers.

"This means that we have personally met, and correspond directly with, every single local grower, farmers, baker, creator and producer that you see listed on our website," the organizers state.

The market is held at North Phoenix Baptist Church, 5757 N. Central Ave. For information, call 602-859-5648 or visit www.uptownmarketaz.com.

Just a few miles northeast is the Roadrunner Park Farmers' Market, at 3502 E. Cactus Rd. Shoppers will find local farm produce including fresh vegetables and fruit, baked goods, honey, nursery stock, natural pork, beef and fish, and handcrafted items.

Families can make a day of it by spending time at Roadrunner Park, which includes children's playground with play equipment, a fishing pond, ducks and geese on premises, swimming pool, soccer fields, and all kinds of special events.

Organizers say that canine "Good Citizens" are always welcome at the market, which runs from 7 to 10 a.m. Saturdays during summer months. Learn more at www.arizonacommuni-
